In 1964, the National Film Board of Canada asked John Coltrane to record the soundtrack for a French-language film titled Le chat dans le sac. Amazingly, no announcement was made that Coltrane was adding new performances to this film. For years, viewers of the film thought they were listening to the original recordings, though in fact they were new. Now, we can hear these newly-discovered recordings on Blue World.

Price: $18.99

Out-of-print for many years, this European re-release of the enigmatic Leon Redbone's 1988 Christmas album comes just a few months after we lost him. Only one week later, Leon's longtime friend Dr. John also said goodbye. The two purveyors of folk, blues, jazz and Tin Pan Alley hook up on this album's seasonal favourite, "Frosty the Snowman." The whole album is a pleasant mixture of Christmas songs, all in the typically unique Redbone style.

Academy Award-winner Al Pacino stars as an undercover cop pitched into New York's seedy underbelly in Cruising — available for the first time on Blu-ray in a brand new director-approved transfer. New York is caught in the grip of a sadistic serial killer who is preying on the patrons of the city's underground bars. Rookie Steve Burns (Pacino) infiltrates the S&M subculture to try to lure the killer out of the shadows — but as he immerses himself into the underworld, he risks losing his own identity in the process.

The Replacements' album, Don't Tell a Soul, struck diehard fans as an act of betrayal in '89. The jewel of Dead Man's Pop is the original producer's new mix of that album, which is closer to everyone's original intent than the bigger, slicker sound the record company demanded. Throw in a disc of demos, their legendary drunken session with Tom Waits and a 2-disc live set from the era, and you have an astonishing rewrite of musical history.

Sugar & Joy, The Dead South’s tightest, weirdest and most exciting studio work yet, is their first album written and recorded outside Regina. It’s not exactly the feel-good vibe some bluegrass fans have generally come to expect. The ongoing question of what is, or is not, bluegrass music, occasionally froths up in The Dead South’s wake as they speed on to the next gig, but the appeal of The Dead South’s dark and distinctive sound is undeniable.

A month before he died, Leonard Cohen had asked his son, Adam, to complete the musical sketches left over from their prior collaboration on 2016's You Want It Darker. Cohen Jr. began working on the material alone in a garage near his father's old house, later inviting other contributors to be part of the process. They include the likes of Beck, Damien Rice, Feist and more.
